The State of Florida has the second highest number of unsheltered homeless people in the country, as reported in the 2013 Point in Time report compiled by The United States Department of Housing and Urban Development ("HUD"). Fifty-eight percent of the chronically homeless population in the country are unsheltered individuals, of which Florida has nine percent or 9,647 on its streets. The Orlando area has the largest unsheltered chronic homeless population in Florida of over 1,577. In conjunction with the Central Florida Continuum of Care, the Central Florida Commission on Homelessness and HUD, the City is committed to a "Housing First" approach and finds the creation of permanent supportive housing with wraparound services to be a key solution for the chronically homeless.

Many people experiencing homelessness want to work. With the right blend of supports, most can overcome their personal barriers to do so successfully. Successful employment interventions can promote not only personal development and healthier habits for individuals experiencing homelessness, but also broader societal goals, including helping to prevent and end homelessness. Employment is just one component of this broader undertaking, but it is a crucial one.

Those who are formerly, chronically homeless (experiencing long-term homelessness or experiencing multi-year episodes of homelessness with a debilitating physical or mental condition) and who are currently in permanent supportive housing, benefit greatly from access to employment when it is presented in a seamless and coordinated fashion. The integration of housing and support services with customized employment services will help those who are in permanent supportive housing to move more effectively towards self-sufficiency.

Beyond the Recipient's own criteria and referral process, the Recipient will also take client referrals from agencies that are providing case management services to those who are in permanent supportive housing (PSH), Homeless Service Network (HSN), and other agencies as identified by the City as being providers of PSH case management and partners in Housing First. The Recipient will evaluate the recommendations made by the referring agency and make final decisions on participant eligibility and selection. The expected outcome is that there would be a mixture of PSH clients included into the program, beyond the normal Good Source criteria of those who are homeless and imminently homeless.
